

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 15-CR-3

ALPHONSO C. REAVIS, JR.
Defendant.

DECISION AND ORDER

On September 3, 2015, Judge Randa sentenced defendant Alphonso Reavis to 48 months in prison on a felon in possession of a firearm charge. The judgment included recommendations that defendant participate in the 500 hour drug treatment program and that he be placed at a facility as close to this district as possible. (R. 20 at 2.)

On November 21, 2017, defendant filed a motion for a judicial recommendation to the Bureau of Prisons ("BOP") that he receive the maximum amount of pre-release halfway house time under 18 U.S.C. § 3624(c).¹ (R. 22.) In the motion, defendant indicates that he is not seeking to amend the sentence or correct the judgment under Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure 35 and 36. Rather, he asks the court to consider his conduct and programming in making a post-sentencing recommendation that he receive 9-12 months of halfway house placement. He details the programming he has completed and indicates that he has a re-entry plan to follow once he is at the halfway house. (R. 22 at 3.)

¹The court received several similar motions from inmates at FCI Oxford. It appears the motions were prompted by the closure of a number of federal halfway houses, which reduced the available beds for pre-release inmates. (R. 24 at 3 n.1.)

The case was reassigned to me, and I ordered the government to respond. Specifically, I directed the government to address whether the court has jurisdiction to make such a recommendation and whether, assuming it does, the court should make a recommendation in this case. The government has filed its response, and defendant a reply. I now deny the motion.

I.

Section 3624(c)(1) provides:

The Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall, to the extent practicable, ensure that a prisoner serving a term of imprisonment spends a portion of the final months of that term (not to exceed 12 months), under conditions that will afford that prisoner a reasonable opportunity to adjust to and prepare for the reentry of that prisoner into the community. Such conditions may include a community correctional facility.

In deciding such placement, the BOP considers a variety of factors, including “any statement by the court that imposed the sentence . . . recommending a type of penal or correctional facility as appropriate.” 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b)(4)(B); see also 18 U.S.C. § 3624(c)(6) (directing the BOP to issue regulations ensuring that placement in a community correctional facility is conducted in a manner consistent with § 3621(b)); 28 C.F.R. § 570.22 (“Inmates will be considered for pre-release community confinement in a manner consistent with 18 U.S.C. section 3621(b), determined on an individual basis, and of sufficient duration to provide the greatest likelihood of successful reintegration into the community, within the time-frames set forth in this part.”).

Courts routinely make recommendations regarding prison placement and programming at the time of sentencing. However, it is unclear whether the district court has similar authority when acting on a prisoner's post-sentencing motion.² Some courts have issued such recommendations pursuant to § 3621(b)(4)(B) without specifically addressing this jurisdictional issue. See, e.g., United States v. Qadri, No. CR 06-00469, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38716, at *4 (D. Haw. Mar. 15, 2017); United States v. Baker, No. 3:01cr94-01, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11418, at *1, *6 (M.D. Ala. Jan. 29, 2013); see also United States v. Bartels, No. 12-cr-20072, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 164056, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 29, 2016) (making a recommendation under § 3621(b), but acknowledging the government's view that the court could not order the BOP to take such action).

Other courts have acknowledged that they may not, in response to such a motion, amend or modify the judgment, but have concluded that they may nevertheless issue a recommendation separate and apart from the judgment. United States v. Brattin, No. 2:13-cr-00161, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112222, at *5-6 (D. Nev. Aug. 23, 2016); United States v. Palacios, No. 05CR2203, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65644, at *7 (S.D. Cal. July 14, 2007); see also United States v. Booker, Criminal No. 13-3 (JRT/FLN), 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82485, at *5 (D. Minn. May 16, 2018) (finding that the court has authority to issue a non-binding recommendation, but declining to do so in that case); United States v. Collins, No. 2:15-cr-00176-7-TLN, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35699, at *2-4 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 5, 2018) (granting such a request, without opposition by the government, under §§ 3621 & 3624); United States v. Doyle, Criminal Action No. 15-90, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18366, at *1-2 (E.D. La. Feb. 5, 2018) (citing §§ 3621 & 3624 and granting request); United States v. Marshall, No.

²In United States v. McHugh, 528 F.3d 538, 540-41 (7th Cir. 2008), the Seventh Circuit held that another court cannot review or revise a sentencing judge's original recommendation. However, the court of appeals did not address the precise issue before me here.

2:16-CR-00096, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10499, at *2-3 (E.D. Tenn. Jan. 23, 2018) (“The court notes the government’s objection, but finds that although the court cannot order the Bureau of Prisons to transfer defendant to a halfway house, the court can make a recommendation for defendant.”); United States v. Jackson, Criminal No. 16-05-05 (JDB), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 201726, at *3-5 (D.D.C. Dec. 7, 2017) (finding that § 3621 permitted a non-binding recommendation but declining to issue one in that case).

Finally, some courts have indicated that they lack authority to grant such relief after sentencing. See United States v. Green, No. 10-20096-01, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80198, at *2 (D. Kan. June 22, 2015) (“[T]he Court does not have jurisdiction to amend defendant’s sentence at this time to include a specific recommendation on placement in a residential re-entry facility.”); United States v. Landers, No. 6:09-cr-0893-10, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 144450, at *3 (D.S.C. Oct. 7, 2013) (“The court is aware of no authority by which it may issue a recommendation for halfway house placement at this late stage.”); see also United States v. Sanders, No. CR 13-03696 RB, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80162, at *3-4 (D.N.M. May 9, 2018) (“[N]o comparable BOP regulation authorizes a prisoner to seek a post-sentencing recommendation as to pre-release custody when the original judgment is silent as to RRC placement.”); United States v. Tipton, No. 14-20142, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49178, at *2 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 26, 2018) (“[T]he Court finds that Defendant has not shown that the Court has authority to make a judicial placement recommendation to the FBOP apart from what the court already ordered and recommended in the Judgment[.]”).³

³United States v. George, No. 14-20119, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78877, at *7 (E.D. Mich. May 10, 2018) (“The BOP has total authority over Defendant’s placement, date of release, and/or any pre-release, and the Court will not attempt to influence this BOP decision. 18 U.S.C. §3624 and §3621(b). The BOP has the most complete and accurate information regarding the

In its response, the government indicates that the better reasoned cases have concluded that there is no authority to issue such a recommendation post-sentencing, and that McHugh suggests there is no free floating authority to issue judicial recommendations absent a pending case or controversy. (R. 24 at 4.) In any event, the government contends that I should decline to issue a recommendation now, as the BOP is better positioned to make such determinations. The BOP is familiar with the offender and his adjustment in prison, how his situation compares with that of other inmates, his current treatment needs, the available resources, and the other relevant considerations. (R. 24 at 4-5.) The court, on the other hand, can act only on a case-by-case basis, based on dated information, and lacking the BOP's expertise in such matters. (R. 24 at 5-6.) Moreover, the original sentencing judge in this case is deceased, and whatever institutional knowledge the court may have is limited and dated, and may not be significantly helpful to the BOP. The government therefore argues the motion should be denied. (R. 24 at 6.)

In reply, defendant contends that the court is authorized to make a recommendation after sentencing, as the court is not modifying or correcting the sentence, but merely making a recommendation. (R. 25 at 1.) He further argues that the court should make a recommendation here, noting the benefits to his rehabilitation. (R. 25 at 3.)

II.

On the issue of the court's authority, I agree with what appears to be the majority position: while the court may not modify the original judgment or otherwise order the BOP to grant pre-release time in response to a defendant's post-sentencing motion, it may issue a non-binding recommendation. Because such a recommendation is advisory only, it does not run afoul of the limitations on modifying sentences contained in 18 U.S.C. § 3582 and Fed. R. Crim. P. 35, and because 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b) directs the BOP to consider any statement by the court that imposed the sentence, not just statements made at the time of sentencing, the court may issue such a recommendation later.⁴ Jackson, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 201726, at *4.

Nevertheless, I will decline to issue a recommendation in this case. I was not the original sentencing judge and can offer no greater insight than anyone else reviewing the court's record. While defendant appears to have done well in prison – and I commend him for that – the BOP is better situated to determine whether his conduct and programming warrants more halfway house time.

III.

THEREFORE, IT IS ORDERED that defendant's motion (R. 22) is denied.⁵

⁴McHugh involved a situation in which a successor district judge purported to change her predecessor's recommendation. That situation is not presented here, as Judge Randa made no recommendation on this issue.

⁵This order should not be construed by the BOP as opposition to greater pre-release time.
